PREFACE

FOURTEEN years of daily work have been given to the preparation and printing of this second volume of the Subject-Index. With its publication the ideal catalogue described by the Library's late Vice-President, Mr Frederic Harrison, is still unattained. An ideal Subject-Index, he said, should have "a range not exceeding 250,000 volumes, and these should be the result of systematic expert selection." Sir Leslie Stephen's criticism of the Library was similar. According to him, the London Library contained "everything that a man ought to wish to read." To extend its capacity was, he thought, a doubtful blessing. But the popularity of the Library and the demands made on it have inevitably increased its books, while the range of subjects has largely widened with the growth of modern scientific, economic and historical problems and the rise of many small nationalities. At the same time, the new generation has also become more exacting and the modern scholar more impatient in his hunt for information. The result is, that it has been necessary to exceed the limitations recommended by its former President and by its late Vice-President.

This second volume of the Subject-Index not only contains 2696 new headings, but also shows how far the lacunæ disclosed in the volume issued in 1909 have been filled up. The whole is evidence of the developments in literature, history and science during the last fourteen years, and of the consequent difficulty in keeping a Subject-Index within a confined limit.

The utility of a Subject-Index has not yet been fully appreciated. The individual is, generally speaking, inclined to seek information from any source other than that provided for him. Unskilled in the handling of indexes and dictionaries, he would rather turn to the Librarian or his assistant, who, by the constant use of books of reference, have acquired a flair in finding out items of knowledge. While it is impossible to eliminate personal application altogether, the Subject-Indexes are designed to be a real assistance to the reader. The choice of headings and sub-headings has been carefully made; words and expressions in ordinary use always receiving a preference over the more scientific. With the minimum of trouble the whole plan of the Subject-Index can easily be grasped, and its study should repay the user a hundredfold.

The numerous references to cognate headings already printed in Vol. I (1909) of the Subject-Index have not been repeated in this volume, though many additional references have been made.

It is one of the characteristics of the life of a Librarian that he never at any time reaches finality nor is able to regard any work in the Library as ended. No catalogue is final; every book has its successor; and sooner or later every book-shelf must be extended. To save printing, and in a measure to save the Librarian from the irksomeness of this never-ending round of work, many Institutions adopt the so-called card catalogues; but this can neither replace the printed catalogue in the Library, nor be made available to the student for consultation in his own study. The Committee of the London Library, therefore, decided to print the second volume of the Index to enable readers to obtain full advantage of the large additions made to the Library in the last few years, and to put its rich resources more adequately at their disposal.

I am indebted as before to the staff, men and women, of the London Library (including Mr F. J. Cox, Mr J. Bean, Mr G. E. Manwaring, Miss H. Manwaring, Mr A. E. Davies and Mr G. Shapland) for loyal assistance in carrying on the ordinary work of the Library during these years of crisis. Owing to their willingness and diligence no department of the Library routine was neglected, and the members of the cataloguing staff were able to continue the work on the Subject-Index almost uninterruptedly. A few inconsistencies may be attributed to the constant unavoidable changes which took place during the War—the Library being practically depleted of the larger part of its expert staff. A special word of gratitude should be accorded to Miss A. Richmond, who was transferred to the cataloguing staff in 1911, and who throughout this period has shown exceptional energy and accuracy. Dr H. O. Sommer has also rendered much assistance in reading the proofs. To my great sorrow two of the earlier workers—Mr C. Kennelly and Mr E. Newman—fell in the War.

C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT.

NOTES

THE SUBJECT-INDEX is a Supplement to the Author Catalogue, and is not intended to be used quite independently of it, though, generally speaking, this is possible.

GENERAL ARRANGEMENT OF ENTRIES UNDER HEADING

The arrangement of the books under each heading will, it is hoped, be seen at a glance. The entries which immediately follow the heading are the works, theoretical or practical, dealing with the subject generally. Then follow the various sub-headings in alphabetical order, and lastly, at the end, the general references.

Practical considerations have governed the arrangement as to the number, or omission, of sub-headings.

ALPHABETICAL ORDER

The headings are arranged in alphabetical order, all compound words and phrases, such as Land Taxation ; Stone Implements ; &c., being for this purpose reckoned as if spelt in one word. Special attention must be given to this point.

In the arrangement of groups of books and sub-headings preference has throughout been given to alphabetical order, even when in a few instances under historical headings a chronological order seemed more desirable.

HEADINGS

In the choice of words and combinations of words for headings I have been guided by the desire to select those to which the ordinary person would naturally turn. Many phrases and compound words in everyday use will therefore be found, as, for example : Nature Study ; Object Teaching ; Rural Depopulation ; Home Rule ; Tree Worship ; Lake Dwellings ; Stone Monuments ; Land Taxation ; Place Names ; Imperial Federation ; National Defence ; Ancestor-Worship ; Self-Culture ; Representative Government ; Crown Lands ; Second Advent. All these combinations of words are reckoned as one word in the alphabetical arrangement.

A " Heading " is always printed in Bold Latin type, sic : Oxford.

SUB-HEADINGS

Consistency in the matter of sub-headings has not been attempted. They have been chosen to suit the varying character of the heading and the nature of the books possessed by the Library.

The sub-headings have been made as numerous as possible, though this has involved a certain amount of overlapping and duplication of entries.

When the books dealing with a subject are exceptionally numerous, an attempt has been made to subdivide still further.

The task of differentiation has, however, often been difficult. In some cases books purely Topographical have been separated from books of Travel, and works on the Social Life of a country have been grouped under a special sub-heading or heading, and purely military works have been separated from Reminiscences (see Franco-German War). This arrangement has not been followed where it appeared unnecessary.

Sub-headings are always printed in Display Italics, sic : History, Topography & Antiquities.

REFERENCES

As a rule, the numerous references given at the end of each subject-division in Volume I of the Subject-Index have not been repeated in this volume, but references have been added to all fresh divisions.

STYLE OF ENTRY: The reason for placing a book under a particular heading is not always self-evident, owing to titles being shortened; the reader ought to have the Author Catalogue at hand to consult if he wishes to ascertain the full title.

Abbreviations Everything has been done to ensure condensation and brevity consistent with clearness, and various devices have been adopted to that end.

(1) When the words of the heading recur in the titles of the book initials are substituted for them, as, for example, under Birds:

Finn (F.) B. behaviour, 1919.

Attention must therefore always be paid to the headings and sub-headings under which the entries appear, or reference must be made to the Author Catalogue.

(2) The following omissions may be specially noted:

(a) The initials of names of authors when the surname is uncommon and the omission does not interfere with easy reference to the Author Catalogue.

(b) The opening words of many titles, such as: Lectures on; Short account of; Dissertation sur; Etude sur; Mémoires sur; Observations sur; Remarques sur; &c.

(c) The definite and indefinite articles, both in English and foreign titles, as a rule.

(d) All bibliographical details.

Where the Library contains several pamphlets on the same subject by one or various authors bound together, they have not always been catalogued separately, but only one pamphlet has been catalogued as a specimen, and the letters "& o. p." (="and other papers" or "and other pamphlets" on the same subject) have been added to the entry.

Brackets in Entries (1) Entries of anonymous works are sometimes preceded by a word or name in square brackets, as, for example:

[Lewes]. Song of L. (1264), 1890.
[Parma]. Chron. Parmense, 1038–1338, 1902.

This indicates that the full entry will be found in the Author Catalogue under that name [i.e. Lewes; Parma].

(2) The letter "B" in square brackets at the end of an entry indicates that the book mentioned contains a bibliography of the subject, as, for example:

Castro (L. de) Nella terra dei Negus, 2v, 1915. [B.]

(3) When works which have been published as separate essays or in serial form also make part of another volume, the volume or serial in which they are to be found is added in square brackets, if reference to the Author Catalogue would not immediately provide the information, as, for example:

Adams (W.) Log-book (1614–19), 1916; [& in Japan Soc. Trans., v13, 1915].
Evans (A. J.) Prehist. tombs of Knossos, 1906; [& in Arch., v59 ii, 1905].

Dashes A dash (–) before a date in a title indicates that the work covers the whole period of the heading down to the given date, as, for example:

Fletcher (C. R. L.) Introd. hist. (–1815), 4v, 1904–9.

A dash (–) after a date of publication indicates that the Library has the subsequent volumes to the present date, as, for example:

Connoisseur, 1901–.

Dates (1) Care has been taken to insert dates of the period covered by the work wherever possible, especially in the case of historical works. When no date is given for an historical work it is to be understood that the book is a general work on the subject.

(2) If the book is a reprint, the original date of publication has been inserted.

(3) Under the sub-heading "Biographies," in cases where the dates of birth and death have been unobtainable the reader will find dates in parentheses. These dates are not those of birth and death, but are those covered by the book or books.

Editions The dates of editions are separated by a semi-colon. When successive editions have a different number of volumes, the number of volumes of the first edition only (or, if the first edition is not possessed by the Library, the earliest edition possessed) is given, as, for example:

Wells (H. G.) Outline, 2v, 1919–20; 1920; 1921.

STYLE OF ENTRY:

If the Library possesses three or more editions the words "var. ed." (=various editions) or "see A.C." (=see Author Catalogue) have been added to the entry, and the Author Catalogue must be consulted for the dates.

Editors

The names of editors have, in most cases, been omitted. But where the name of the editor has been important and the means of identification of the edition, it has been inserted.

For the sake of brevity the words "edited by," "herausgegeben," &c., have been omitted, and the name of the editor, preceded by a semi-colon only, added, as, for example:

Arthur, k. of Brit. Vulgate version of A. romances; Sommer, 7v, 1908–16.

Italics

When the letters "Wks." (=Works) are printed in italics the reader must understand all the works entered in the Author Catalogue. This abbreviation does not refer to any particular edition, as, for example:

Böhme (J.) Wks., see A.C.

Translations

In general, the titles of translations have not been given when there is a copy of the original in the Library, but the fact that there is a translation in the Library is noted by the letters "tr.," and the date of its publication is given.

HISTORY

General works of History have been placed under the name of the country. Great events in the history of a country or of the world will be found as separate headings in the Index rather than under the country, as, for example: Balkan Wars, 1912–13: European War, 1914–18: London, Conference of, 1909: Versailles, Treaty of, 1919: but references have always been made from the country, &c.

Names of sovereigns of the larger and more important countries have also been adopted as headings: e.g. Charles V, Emperor: George V, of Gt. Brit.: Napoleon I, Emp. of the French.

When the sovereign's name serves as a heading, his or her name stands for the period of history which the reign covers: and all books which deal with the history, public finance, &c., of the reign are placed under the name of the sovereign.

CHRONICLES

Many old chronicles have different titles in different editions, e.g. "Annales Magdeburgenses" and "Chronographus Saxo" are two titles of the same chronicle. Either the best known title is given in this Index, or else the title of the first edition is quoted.

(1) Where a chronicle is indexed in the Author Catalogue, the reader is referred to it.

(2) The words "see A.C." are followed by "[& in]" when the work enclosed in brackets has not been indexed in the Author Catalogue, as, for example:

Joannes, Victor. Chron. Carinthiae (1211–1343), see A.C. [& in Eckhart, Corpus, tl, 1723].

(3) Where the note "in var. colls., consult Potthast" occurs, the reader is to understand that the Library contains several editions, but it would be advisable first to consult Potthast's Bibliotheca Historica Medii Ævi, 1896 edition.

BIOGRAPHY

The treatment of Biography calls for remark. It does not form a separate heading, but appears as a sub-heading under the subject with which the biography is properly concerned: for instance, under Acting will be found a sub-heading, Biographies, setting forth the lives of actors, which are in the Library, arranged alphabetically, with dates of birth and death. Such biographies will be found under the actors' names in the Author Catalogue. Under names of sovereigns are entered lists of the biographies of the public men who flourished during their reigns. In the course of indexing, however, biographies other than those given in the Author Catalogue have been unearthed. These are added after the dates of birth and death in square brackets, sic [& in], as, for example:

Foscolo (N. Ugo), 1778–1827; [& in Mazzini (G.) Scritti, v18, 1891].

LITERATURE

Literature has been dealt with as exhaustively as possible; such headings as Drama, Satire, Literature, Poetry, Sonnets, will be found in their alphabetical order in the Index.

Attention, however, is called to the following points:

(1) The pure literature or Belles-Lettres of England, France and Germany has been exceptionally treated. The reader will find such headings as English Literature, French Literature, German Literature, under which there are sub-headings Anthologies, Foreign Influence, History & Criticism, Texts, &c. Under the sub-heading " Texts," only the literary works of English, French and German authors prior to the sixteenth century have been included, because these are interesting from a linguistic point of view and are not as well known as those of the later centuries. Those subsequent to the fifteenth century have been entirely omitted. For the more modern writers the reader may be expected to consult the histories of literature.

(2) It has not been thought necessary to give a list of the names of dramatists and poets under these three literatures (English, French and German drama, and poetry). These lists would be too long, and each dramatist or poet is to be found in the Author Catalogue, together with any biography or criticism of his work.

(3) The Fiction of these three countries has similarly been entirely omitted from this Index, but a few novels have, here and there, been designedly included under the history of countries, &c., where the novel had some special interest. The reader will, however, find headings English Fiction, French Fiction, German Fiction, under which bibliographies and histories have been grouped.

(4) Texts of the works of Ancient Greek and Latin authors have been omitted under Greek Drama, Greek Poetry, Latin Poetry, &c.

(5) The less known literatures have been more fully treated. Complete lists of the names of the literary writers, poets, dramatists and novelists which the Library possesses will be found under Spanish Literature, Spanish Fiction, Spanish Poetry, Italian Fiction, Italian Poetry, &c. For the titles of their works, however, the Author Catalogue must be consulted.

(6) The texts of the works of mediæval Greek and Latin writers will be found in their proper place under Greek Literature, Byzantine ; Latin Poetry, Mediæval & Modern ; Latin Drama, Mediæval & Modern ; Latin Literature, Mediæval & Modern.

TITLES OF HONOUR Titles such as Sir, Honble., &c., have been omitted except when necessary for identification.

When the title or rank of an author has been changed since the issue of the Author Catalogue the form in the A.C. has generally been adhered to.

ESSAYS Discretion has been used as to the inclusion of literary and other essays, and it is hoped that no important omission has been made. As a general rule, essays which are obviously reviews of books have been excluded.

SCIENCE In Botanical and Zoological headings the familiar name, where there is one, has been adopted in preference to the scientific.

COLLECTIONS OF WORKS The works in sets, like the Der Alte Orient; Colección de documentos inéditos; Commentationes Philologae Jenenses ; Migne's Theologiae cursus ; Muratori, Rerum Italicarum Scriptores ; Petermanns Mittheilungen (Ergänzungsbände) ; Staats- u. socialwiss. Forschungen &c., have been indexed according to subject.

PAMPHLETS Many pamphlets have been acquired by the Library since 1909. These have been bound in over 1500 volumes and have been indexed separately in the present volume. The number of the volume of pamphlets is given at the end of each entry, e.g. [P2438]. Pamphlets issued " per nozze " are kept as a separate collection and numbered, e.g. [N36] &c.

PARLIAMENTARY PAPERS The form of entry for Parliamentary Papers has often been as follows :

Parl. papers, see special catalogue.

The special catalogue is the " List of Parliamentary Papers " issued by the Library in 1903, and continued in typescript.

Where separate papers have been indexed the first number in square brackets is the arbitrary number given by the London Library to the bound volume of Papers, those at the end in parentheses are the official Command numbers given to the Papers themselves, as, for example :

Parl. papers [2234]. Irish Convention, 1918. (cd. 9019).

PERIODICALS Periodicals have not been indexed in detail ; but they have been entered collectively under their main subject. Periodicals containing political articles have been grouped under the sovereigns during whose reigns they have been published; as, for example, the Nineteenth Century and After will be found under George V.

SOCIETY PUBLICATIONS

The Proceedings of learned societies have been indexed under subjects, with the result that much valuable work hidden away in those volumes is now brought to light and made available.

The method of treating them is explained in Notes to Vol. 1 (1909).

The following are the sub-headings under European War :

* Counted from the bottom of the column upwards

The following notes are absolutely essential for those who use this Index:—

(1) A.C. = Author Catalogue & Supplement of the London Library, 1913–20; and subsequent entries on cards.

(2) Special catalogue, in connection with entries of Parliamentary Papers, refers to the London Library List of Parliamentary Papers & Supplement (the latter as yet in MS.), 1903–22.

(3) When the words of the heading recur in the titles of the books, initials are substituted for them, as under Astronomy, Newcomb (S.) Pop. a., & Plummer (H. C.) Dynamical a.

(4) & in. Special attention is drawn to & in. Whenever this occurs under the sub-heading Biographies, &c., it is essential to look first in the Author Catalogue, where the chief books dealing with the subject of the Biography are to be found.

(5) The numerous references to cognate headings already printed in Vol. I (1909) of the Subject-Index have not been repeated in this volume.
